Wish You Were Here - Summer Vacation Scrapbook

Everybody appreciates a change of scene every now and then. A hundred years ago when air conditioning consisted of shade trees and awnings, change involved seeking cool breezes whether for a day, a week, or a month, depending on what one's pocketbook could manage.

Ocean View was a popular destination a century ago. The train to Portsmouth, the ferry to Norfolk and the trolley to Ocean View were the way to go before the automobile was so much a part of daily life. Some perhaps better heeled members of the community might take the train west to the mountains seeking a longer respite from the heat.

As the car became more popular many scrapbooks in our collection indicate that there were frequent visits to historic Virginia sites.

And then there were the people who vacationed—summered actually—locally. In the first half of the 20th century some families from old Suffolk chose to spend their summer on the Nansemond River or Bennett's Creek and constructed vacation homes there.

In this summer issue, begun during what has been declared the hottest week of the summer, we share some items from our collections and from friends and one postcard from the internet.

This photo, identified as Ocean View 1910, is from the Lehman family scrapbook, SNHS collection. The Lehmans were a prominent Jewish family who built the house on the SW corner of Bank and Pinner Streets—later the Woman's Club.

Beaches

From this week in history
The Virginian-Pilot, 07.21.13

“1913

The occupants of cottages lining the beach at Ocean View in Norfolk have organized bowling clubs that have become all the rage on the boardwalk alleys during the midsummer evenings. It is reported that many of the young ladies on the teams have developed quite the skill in scoring in the game and many prizes have been won.”

Ocean View 1910, Lehman collection

“The summer after I graduated from Holland High School I was invited by Papa’s friends, Mr. and Mrs. McLean, to go with them to Ocean View on vacation. I took ham, eggs, chicken, corn and apples to help with the meals while I was there. Mr. McLean came to the house for me and the ride was a thrill as we went right down Granby Street in Norfolk to the cottage which was named “Wave Crest.” The Tuxedo Inn was next door. Every afternoon late we went swimming with me wearing a swimsuit borrowed from a neighbor. At night we went to the casino to hear George Mill’s band play and afterwards looked over the amusement park before we went back to the cottage. A ride on the Merry-Go-Round was 10 cents. Mrs. McLean took me uptown on my first bus and streetcar ride and we went to all the big department stores. When it was time to come home Mr. McLean drove me to Suffolk and I caught the bus to Holland where I waited two and one-half hours before Papa came to pick me up. Everybody seemed glad to see me when I returned home and wanted to hear all about my adventures.”

Baseball—Fun at Home

The picture below is very likely an 1897 picture. In 1897 Suffolk fielded one of its earliest organized baseball teams, as a part of the Southeastern League. Suffolk’s team was managed by local attorney S.P. Vanderslice. The rules of the league included a salary cap of no more than $40.00 per month and board for each player, and no club could have more than three “professionals.”

The league played an 18-game schedule that year.

Mountains

Mr. and Mrs. William Crumpler and their son William, Jr., of Bank Street were among those who sought cool mountain breezes. Items in our collections indicate that the neighbors—the Phillips, the Joneses, the Withers—went to the mountains as well. These letterheads and billheads from 1908, 1921 and 1923; Crumpler collection.

Seeing Historic Sites

Numerous old Suffolk/Nansemond County scrapbooks in our possession make it clear—visiting historic sites in Virginia was the thing to do once cars were widely available.

CAMPING PARTY IS BACK FROM TRIP

Suffolk, Sept. 5.—Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ballard, Misses Jamie Felton, Brownie Riddick, Marion Beale, Beatrice Saunders, Messrs. Henry Rawles, Holland Ballard and Richard Darden have returned from a delightful camping party. They camped on the grounds at Camp Washington, Yorktown, Va., near Nectar Springs, for a week.

Boating, fishing and swimming were enjoyed, as well as a number of motor trips to the points of interest around Yorktown.

River and Creek Houses

In the 1920s, '30s and '40s, some Suffolk families chose to build summer residences on (in) the Nansemond River and Bennett's Creek. There were already some pleasure houses (as they were listed on deeds) owned by groups of people, the best known being Nix Club.

In 1927 soon after Jack Nurney (Sr.) and his bride were married they decided to build a simple house for summer living on the Lee Farm, long owned by her family. The chicken house occupied the best spot with sweeping views of Bennett's Creek and Hampton Roads. It was from this spot that earlier family members watched the Battle of the Ironclads in 1862. The view and the breezes were good. So the house known as the Shack replaced the chicken house.

The Nurneys—mother, father, Jack and Gin—would move to the Creek as soon as school was out and stay until Labor Day. Jack, Sr., went into town to work each day. Jack, Jr., spent his time on the water fishing and exploring, or on the farm playing in the fields or the barn. He would sometimes row out to the river house of his friend William Ballard or William would row to Lee Farm and stay at the Shack for a few days.

Jack loved life at the Shack but his sister Gin always missed town and her friends though she developed lifelong friends at the creek. Ironically in adulthood Jack and his wife wound up living downtown and Gin and her husband eventually went to live in the main farm house at Lee Farm. A much improved Shack is now home to one of Gin's children and his family. We regret that we have no photo of the Shack. Jack says his people weren't picture takers.

Miss Therese Nurney (sister of Jack, Sr.) built a small summer house on Bennett's Creek in the 1930s. In the late 1940s Dr. Richardson Joyner of Chestnut Street and attorney Anderson Maxey of South Broad Street hired Norfolk architect Paul Woodward to design summer houses for their families to be built near Miss Therese's. The Joyner and Maxey houses eventually became fulltime residences for members of those families.

The Ballard clubhouse, summer home of the A.W. Ballards. Mrs. Ballard and the children were here when the storm struck in 1933. Mrs. Ballard kept a weather-eye out and, at low tide, they left to go to a friend's house in Driver to ride out the storm. Photo courtesy Robert Hall Ballard.

Above and below: The Anderson Maxey house and the dock crossing the marsh to deep water. A rowboat was kept at the dock and fishing and crabbing were favorite pastimes. Photo c. 1950 courtesy Andy Maxey.

Nix Club was owned by a group of people. The story of the Birdsong clan's adventures here during the 1933 hurricane is well known. This photo was taken on a calm day earlier that summer and the boat belonged to Col. R.L. Brewer. Evelyn Daughtrey scrapbook.
